The Dance of Feminism with Human Rights: A Reflection on 25 years of Advances, Backlash and Challenges

In her lecture, Professor Bunch will reflect upon the development of the global women's human rights movement over the past twenty-five years. She will look at the advances made by women in the global arena, especially around the United Nations, as well as how feminism has influenced international human rights concepts and strategies. In discussing the challenges ahead, she will also address the backlash against feminism, particularly pertaining to culture and the tensions between universality and particularity.

Co-Sponsored by The School of Interdisciplinary Studies, The Department of Women's and Gender Studies, Disability Studies Program, Law and Social Thought Program and Master of Liberal Studies Program.
