From February 18-March 4, 2011 sixteen undergraduate Rutgers University students participated in a pilot training for the United Nations Commission on the Status of Women.

I have gained a global lens, which forces me to look at myself as an agent of change. This new found perspective of myself will enable me to not look at injustices as the responsibility of others but of myself as well. - Participant

I learned a lot and my expectations were exceeded. Being part of this training really made me want to learn more about global issues and become more involved. - Participant
